Copper Need Will Increase

VANCOUVER (CP) - The VANCOUVER (CP) — The head of a Vancouver copper-producing company said Thursday the industry has come through a down cycle in the economy in relatively healthy conditions and that improved conditions can be healthy expected by the end of the Ross Duthle, presedent of Craigmont Mines Ltd., told the company's annual meeting that the industry has had to face substantially decreased profits, reduced de-mand and a drop in prices.

Although a continuing de-pressed market is indicated for the next few months, "the demand for metals must increase even if only a moderate improvement in the standard of living throughout the world is to be realized," he said.

"This demand will inevitably lead to more stable metal pricing and probably to an increase in the price of most metals."

duatry has witnessed a sub-stantial decrease in the ca-pacity of established smelters "as the governments of vari-ous nations have imposed more and more stringent air pollution standards." pollution standards.'

He said Craigmont's major customer, Nippon Mining Co. of Japan, has cut back its copper concentrate require-ments following curtailment of its smelter operation can accept only 70 per cent of Craigmont's production, which has made it necessary for the company to arrange sales to other smelters, main by in Europe, at less favorable terms than it receives from

He said increased costs due to expensive anti-pollution equipment at overseas smelters has prompted several companies to study the feasi-bility of building a smelter

Computer To Link Banks

TORONTO (CP) - A ec puter system, linking all Bank of Montreal branches but those in isolated areas, should be completed by the target date of 1974, bank president J Leonard Walker said Wednes-day. Installation started two years ago

Walker told the Toronto Society of Security Analysts the system which will centralize all the bank's bookeeping, would be the first of its kind

In addition to releasing staff from routine tasks, he said the system would provide fast information for decision-making and give management a better and more current pic ture of the bank's assets and liabilities.

Wheat prices also edged up-ward, but corn prices closed irregular. Small gains were Buying of soybeans was strong. Trade sources thought this emanated from a belief that U.S. farmers would not increase soybean acreage as much as the government had asked them to.

Buying of grain futures was stimulated by some optimism that the renewed longshore-men's talks on the West Coast would bring a settlement.

Tenure Tricky Problem

VANCOUVER (CP) - University of British Columbia president Walter Gage said Thursday tenure for university professors "has become a problem in recent years" but UBC has been able to resolve most of its problems.

But, he added, the university will offer any advice it can to the select committee on education and welfare. Thursday's throne speech said the committee "will be asked to review the tenure of members of the faculties in the public universities.'

UBC now is engaged in a study of its relationship with its faculty including tenure. "So far we have managed to solve most of our tenure dis-putes internally, and we hope we shall be able to continue to do so," said Dean Gage.

Academic vice-president Brian Wilson of Simon Fraser University who is filling in for vacationing president Kenneth Strand, said tenure is a needed provision to protect

The university has nothing particularly to hide in its rela-tionship with the practice," he said. "I don't think the situa-tion here is different from anywhere else in Canada."

Perfect Landing

PETAWAWA, Ont. (CP) A veteran pilot made a cresh landing in text-book fashion Thursday, saving the lives mother and two small chil-ren aboard his twin-engine Piper Apache aircraft.

Mrs. Edward Van Zant, 27, of Ottawa, and her daughters. Terri-Ann, 4, and Katherine, 1, escaped without injury when the plane went down in the woods of Algonquin Park, near Killaloe, Ont., mid-way in a 200-mile flight from Ottawa to North Bay, Ont.

Pilot W. S. Nichols, 48, of North Bay, who has been flying for 30 years, suffered the only injury, a cut that required two stitches.

All four were picked up by rescue helicopter which found the crash site as a re-sult of information radioed be-fore the plane went down, and

COULDN'T FIND LAKE

Mr. Nichols said later he looked for a frozen lake when his engines failed but found none within gliding range. He then headed for an open ridge, only to find it was dotted with stumps. Left with no other choice, he crash-landed into tall trees, putting the fu-selage down and allowing the wings to shear off, in an effort to reduce speed.

On the ground and not seriously hurt, he took his passengers to the ridge where he built a lean-to and fur-nished it with seats from the

MANY JOBS AVAILABLE -TRUDEAU

TORONTO (CP) - There are "many, many" jobs avail-able in most parts of Canada, Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau said Friday.

He told a small audience during a visit to an Italian community training and coun-selling centre that there were columns and columns of help wanted advertisements in Canadian newspapers. But, he said, many jobs are not filled because unemployed Canadians are unwilling to work at them or to locate where they are available.

The prime minister, who foured a woodworking shop in centre and met students and teachers there, was responding to a question by Tiziana Battaglia, 19, an Engish-language student.

She asked why Carrada was continuing to encourage im-migrants to this country when there were so many people looking for work.

Mr. Trudeau said he didn't think most of the immigration officers abroad painted an excessively rosy picture of Can-

The men became ill after having been instructed by Sgt. H. F. Hurford to bite off a piece of the plastic explosive C4, chew it, and spit it out.

The Big Mail-out has begun.

Tax reform legislation has been approved by Parliament and is now law.

What does tax reform mean to you? How will it affect you?

To answer these questions, the Department is conducting a massive national mailing program. Booklets are now being printed and mailed to all taxpayers as quickly as they come off the press.

The complete mailing will be finished in about four weeks.

All taxpayers will receive at least two booklets-

The Most . . . Closed, Quiet And Policed

The most "closed" opening in the history of the legislature went off quietly Thursday afternoon with corridors full of policemen but some empty seats in the public galleries.

Even government employees had trouble getting into the main Legislative Building as tight security went into effect in the early afternoon.

A bomb threat which didn't materialize and the heavy rains were believed by officials to be, responsible for the unusual sight of several empty seats in the public galleries.

In front of the building, a group of about 100 onlookers was outnumbered by the combined police, officialdom and ceremonial guard for the arrival of Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson.

Roped off from the ceremonies, the well-behaved little crowd was a marked contrast to the 2,000 strong which turned out last 'year to profest high unemployment.

At that time about 300 young persons invaded the inside of the legislature, smashing windows, ripping down at least one flat, and, in limited fighting in the public gallery, slightly injured a 59-year-old parliamentary attendant.

This year, no one, including little old ladies, filtered through the entrances, which were jammed with policemen. Only those privileged persons armed with a welter of credentials were allowed in.

"I'm very disappointed I couldn't get in," commented retired school teacher Jeri Dill of Pittsburgh.

She had jokingly asked one hefty policemen if she could trade garb with him so she could sneak in for a peek at the throne speech formalities.

There were no groups present protesting unemployment this year, which is only slightly lower than last year.

AOily one protest group was in evidence and that was made up of a half-dozen smiling members of the Victoria Status of Women Action Group. They had the only protest sign—if you could call it that—and it said, "the eyes of the women of B.C. are you.

President Kathleen Ruff said they were there, representing a local membership of 60, to indicate that they want B.C. to implement the recommendations of the 1967 Royal Commission on the Status of Women.

The Human Rights Act (in B.C.) seems impressive on paper," she said, but in reality "it has no teeth.

She said they planned to do no more than stand there, t added invitations had been sent out to the handful of omen MLAs for a meeting in the near future.

The rest of the crowd appeared to be only idle onlookers, unless the "prince of the ponces" who had earlier in the day phoned police that he may bomb the opening was unobtru-

When Premier Bennett appeared at the door with pro-vincial secretary Lawrie Wallace to greet the arrival of Nicholson, one of the few young men in the crowd yelled: 'He's going to be assassinated!'

The only time the police jumped, and the crowd muttered, was when the 21-gun salute started booming away.

One policeman was seen going automatically for his holster when the first blast sounded.

As the color guard marched away and the officials went inside, one note of discontent was heard from the quickly disappearing crowd: "I'm disappointed that he (the lieutenant-governor) didn't come in a carriage

Inside the building there appeared to be a policeman at every corner and every stairway.

One female employee on the cleaning staff complained that she was taking mud off her shoes in a room with a closed when a policeman suddenly entered to ask what she

She said she could just as easily have been changing her

The formal silence in the legislature during the reading of the 30-minute opening speech by Nicholson ended when the customary opening day motions were placed before the house and MLAs began heckling each other.

The higgest laugh came when former Social Credit MLA Scott Wallace stood to vote with the government in upholding a ruling by Speaker William Murray which had been chall lenged by Opposition Leader Dave Barrett, It was the first formal vote of the new session.

Top Black Leader Arrested by Police

SALISBURY (CP) - Eight black Africans were killed and 14 wounded by police gunfire in Umtali Thursday night, bringing the death toll to 14 in riots in Rhodesia over terms proposed for an independence settlement.

An official announcement here of the casualties in the eastern city, 150 miles from Salisbury, came a few hours after security police swooped on the Salisbury black town-ship of Highfields today and arrested Josiah Chinamano, a top black nationalist leader.

Chinamano is national trea-surer of the African National Council which is leading a vigorous campaign against black acceptance of indepenthat acceptance of independence terms, now being tested for "acceptability" here by the British commission headed by Lord Pearce.

Twenty-four persons were arrested in the violence at Umfall, the government announced.

About 300 blacks were arday. Police said the raid was intended to prevent a riot. Many of those arrested were released after being screened. but suspected trouble makers were held in custody.

MEETING CANCELLED

Trouble flared in Umtali after the cancellation of a meeting which two Pearce commission members were due to hold in Sakubba to the ship on the outskirts of the city Thursday afternoon. The city has 10,000 whites and 41,000 blacks.

Groups of blacks stoned houses, shops and autos, injuring four Europeans. They also stopped a train by tearing up the tracks. Police opened fire on the rioters, sealed off the township and imposed a curfew. The Umtali rioting followed

COOPER'S HAWK, working Island View Beach, ponders the problem of making a living the hard ing! At least that's the way I read the look on that little hawk's face! A bit anthropomorphic? Sure, but how else does a frail humand mind in-

Here was a sharp-shinned hawks doing what comes natu-rally, trying to keep body and soul together and things were just not going his way.

The hawk and I first crossed paths at the south end of Esquimait Spit. He had materialized from some scrub over near the Ocean Cement property and was making for Fort Rodd, post haste! I had just made my way down I a-goon Road on my usual morning round-about trip to town.

As I turned the car on to the spit and fell in beside the hawk, he began a hunting sor-tic down the spit. Alternately flapping and gliding about two or three feet above the ground, with Hosford at the wheel not 50 feet away, he was casing the joint, hoping to scare up a meal. At least that was the way I saw it.

minds were on similar wavelengths when a group of sandpipers made an almost fatal mistake and flared up from the lagoon shore. Except for one, obviously not yet schooled in the arts of survival, they veered sharply, close to the ground and back-tracked on the hawk's flight

The exception was grabbing air as fast as its tiny wings could beat, trying to out-climb the hawk. It was no contest. In less time than it takes to put these words to paper, the hawk had struck, the sand-piper tumbled towards the ground and hawk banked to take his prey.

But where was the prey In a steep, lightning-like dive, the hawk had landed on a drift log and was scanning the area where he expected to see a mortally wounded sand-piper; one he could quickly highly and to add finish. Popular Picture Untrue

This little incident reminded me, in a graphic way, that despite the popular picture of the bold, dashing, efficient killer, most predators are liftle more than opportunists which take what they can get.

Down through the years most of them have become specialists, being a little better suited for one type of hunting than another. Our sharp-shin is a bush-beater; the osprey a fisherman, the peregrine a guided-missile and the weasel a roto-roofer with a mind of

But in spite of these specializations, the predators do not have an easy time of it.

In nearly all cases the principle prey species, be they earth worms, white-footed mice, or Oregon juncoes, have a few things going for them.
If not, they'd have long since departed this vale of tears, and with them would have gone their predators.

Quite apart from the natural balances of supply and demand, predators, in many cases because of their method of catching their prey, lead a hazardous existence them-

In the heat of the hunt, they must concentrate 50 intense-ly on their quarry, that un-foreseen dangers can wipe them out in a moment.

Our Esquimalt hawk went away to hunt another day, no worse off than being empty-taloned. Even this can be a grave danger if allowed to happen too often. But sup-pose, in his acrobatics, he'd pulled a flight muscle—not difficult to imagine when you see the efforts put out by avian predators in the act of catching their prey his hunting days would be over, and so ultimately, his life.

Even the titanic struggle that often ensues when a pack of wolves takes on a healthy moose, frequently extracts a higher price from the wolves than it does from the moose. But a four-footed predator can survive an accident and hunt again, albeit with slightly reduced efficiency

Not so avian predators. In-capacitate them, even briefly, and their lives are forfeit It is a tough way to make a

A Question of Questions

Most of Premier Bennett's Throne Speeches, with their selfcongratulatory review of governmental achievements, sound like election-year statements, and the Speech read yesterday by Lieutenant-Governor Nicholson was no exception. Following the usual custom, it was heavy on the record of the past, sparse but tantalizing in its references to future intentions. And, of course, it is a good bet that the real meat - and perhaps the gravy - of the session will appear much later as the debates reveal the government's inner program. After so many years of Mr. Bennett's masterly leadership we have learned to expect the unexpected.

There are promising glimpses of things to come sprinkled throughout the Speech. What agonies of debate may be heralded in the simple comment that "you will be asked to consider amendments to labor legislation." What opportunities for a valuable advance may be hidden in the remark that last year's provincewide Conference on Libraries "confirmed our conviction that im-

Completion of the study of the Energy Board "to determine the best use of the Province's energy resources to meet power demands up to 1985" could open up a vast panorama of development - or another section on the archive shelves. The promise of steps to set guidelines for pollution control in the mining, metallurgical, chemical and petroleum industries, provides another open-ended conjecture. Steps toward guidelines could be steps in the wilderness, or they could mean firm measures to safeguard the environment of the province.

There is mention of job-creating measures, establishment of permissible noise levels for automobiles, family relations legislation, new legislation covering companies and securities law, a review of tenure for university faculty members, psychiatric home-treatment, regional park amendments, and other provocative topics. the course of the next few weeks will separate the damp squibs from the rockets.

Over the whole session, however, there hangs a topic which in many ways is of even more interest to the members than the legislation ahead. That is the big question: Will this be his last? - meaning, of course, when will Mr. Bennett decide to step aside and leave his crown up for grabs by his increasingly tense lieutenants. That is a question beside which the others seem pallid. The answer certainly isn't in the Throne Speech, nor is it likely to emerge from the session ahead. But the question is there, nevertheless, and sooner or later must make headlines.

Not Finis

With a dramatic shock the Vic toria Fair general manager and the company's director have announced the cancellation of this year's Fair. Since its inception in 1969 the Fair has become more financially viable with each passing season. So close to the take-off point this year, it is hard to grasp the real reason for the ambitious program's closing. It seems hardly necessary to expand the scope every year.

This year the theatrical bill would have featured Shakespeare's "The Winter's Tale," Shaw's "Heartbreak House," and Wycherley's "The Country Wife." In addition, there were to be eight chamber orchestra concerts and other events.

This is not the time for an obituary review of the Fair. Victoria is appreciative of the Victoria Fair effort and, while there remains a good measure of public support, the managers of the Fair should make every effort to revive this high event of the summer season. This city wants to retain its robust theatrical traditions and its place on the cultural map. With the proper approach, the public and many visitors would continue to respond to the realistic expectations of the Fair's directors.

figures from Statistics Canada pose difficult economic and political problems for the government. Is the current policy working? Ought there now to be a change of direction for economic reasons and would the country support it?

There is evidence of quickening economic activity. The government was nuch heartened earlier this week when the December report on unemployment howed that the rate, seasonally adjusted, had fallen from 6.6 per cent in vember to 6.2 per cent by the latest measurement. Apparently, massive spending and pump-priming is beginning to produce the expected results.

On the other hand, prices seem to be responding much more sensitively to the Benson-Lang policies than does employ-ment. Despite the slack in the economy, with 530,000 people listed as unemployed, we seem to have bought a marginal improvement in the job situation, seasonally rated, at the cost of the largest advance of the decade (.7 per cent) in the consumer price index.

As Mr. Benson once warned, in relation to unemployment figures, statistics for any single month may be misleading: fluctuations due to particular causes may disguise a general trend. No doubt, this is also true of price movements, which have been largely influenced in the latest returns by the higher costs of imported vegetables.

But the long term trend is also disturbing. The prime minister, interviewed Dec. 28 by Tom Gould, noted that the government moved to an expansionary policy in March, 1970. This is almost two years ago. Since then, it has been repeatedly accelerated; only this week an additional $50 million cially as a Nixon boom appears to be developing in the United States.

But, in fact, although more people are at work (as they must be with an expanding population down by a mere 8,000, as compared to last year. We now find, however, that the all-items price index advanced by five per cent in 12 months. It may be recalled for purposes of comparison that

There may not, at the moment, be the inflationary psychology, which was so troublesome at that time. It could, however, develop very rapidly if people begin to read the message of the consumer index. For, with the dollar losing value at this rate, there is a natural ten dency for both unions and business to seek offsets to expected lags in larger demands on the e conomy. Bryce Mackasey recently expressed optimism about prospects for labor settlements in 1972; he may, however, have been preution of wealth but, as the prime minister has emphasized on many other occasions, it is the poor and the weak who suffer from an inflationary surge.

The difficulty for the government is that successful economic management depends on timing. Fiscal and monetary changes do exert a strong influence on prices and employment. Unfortunately, there may be a very long time lag. To make matters worse it is unpredictable. The effect of policy decisions now may become apparent only 12 or 18 months in the future. In fact, the government has been much criticized because it waited too long before adopting serious antiinflationary policies and then, according to some economists, kept them in force when it ought to have been shifting to a more expansionary course.

In his somewhat academic discussion on the December show, Mr. Trudeau was asked if he would do the same thing again; that is, elect to fight inflation. "I think," he said, "I would take the same line of conduct." He added the opinion that, in these circumstances, there would be a better prospect of co-operation from groups which did not respond on the last

The latest returns from the price front suggest that the problem is becoming less and less academic

It has been quite generally expected that inflation would become more difficult in 1972, as a result of the huge injections of purchasing power into the economy and the government's exhortations for greater consumer spending. But the new price surge appears to be developing earlier than most people assumed and before much headway has been made in bringing unemployment down to reasonably satisfactory levels.

It would be difficult politically to alter course in what is expected to be an election year. On the other hand, there may be a strong economic case for acting now to prevent inflation from breaking out of control later in 1972. The choice is difficult but, if the apparent trend in the firmed by later returns, the government will be risking a good deal if it defers decisions or subordinates economics to other considerations in what may be a Winter Olympic Games at Sapporo, Japan, it is appropriate to consider the proposition that 1972 should be the last year in which international sporting events are divided into categories of 'amateur'' and "professional."

Is it not time for the world to recognize how much society has evolved since the 19th century when these distinctions were initially fostered? A decision should he taken by the International Olympic Committee and all similar groups making future competitions "open" than restricted.

Already, as the French journalist Philippe Labro points out, many of those who will compete at Sapporo are not really amateur in the old-fashioned sense. Communist countries their athletic ability is financed by the state through the armed services or nationally-owned factories. In the west they are often aided by universities and clubs, by gifts from wealthy supporters or by dubious devices involving payment of travel

Ridiculous

Obviously it is ridiculous for the Olympic Committee to ask Communist states to change their social systems to conform to outmoded competitive standards of the west. It is also silly to ask western athletes to compete with those from Marxist lands who train all year round, unless the former have a means of financing their livelihood while train-

The idea of open competition, in which acknowledged professionals rival amateurs, is now commonplace in tennis and golf although artificially divided events for each class remain. It is suitable, however, that henceforth teams or individuals representing their nations in any field, whether skiing, tennis or rowfor example, be made up of the best athletes available rather than those simply rich enough to remain Simon-pure amateurs or others engaged in slightly shady financing arrangements. '- sportsman is a professional according the old - fashioned meaning still endorsed by Olympic or Davis Cup distinct tions. Why? Because there isn't a human being between school age and retirement age in the Communist world who isn't a servant of the state.

'So far as their effect upon our success in international athletic competitions is concerned, there is no doubt that these differences are a distinct handicap, excluding many fine American athletes from competition and inhibiting the training of many more.

Up to now there has been little pressure for action to overcome this handicap, perhaps partly because of natural ictance by some to recognize that traditional concepts in this area have changed, with the difficult adjustment such as recognition might imply, and partly because of a desire to encourage rather than disturb international athletic activities in the interests of cultural ex-

The situation is complicated by the fact that the established poles of international sports bodies generally have, been so set up as to discourage challenges to the technically amateur status of Communist nation athletes, even though they may as a practical matter be tantamount to professional.

Erroneous Approach

This is an erroreous approach to the matter. The proper approach is recognition that the late 20th century, which has discarded 19th century rules on women's suffrage and gentlemen in "trade," should put an end to vestigial snobbery in sports. The original amateur, when odern Olympic games were started and the Davis Cup was offered, was a prosperous individual who often never had to work for a living

Those days are gone. But, although egalitarianism have advanced, this is not yet true of the sporting field. Surely we are past overdue for a reappraisal of the role of athletics in the entire non-Communist world and for an attitude of real-

'Vast Underworld' Begins to Stir In Taut Rhodesia

Like a vast underworld beginning to stir. Rhodesia's Afri cans are showing resistance to the Anglo-Rhodesian settleconcern to the prime min-

Among both the relatively sophisticated urban African population and the mass of easants in the tribal trust lands (where three-quarters of the African people live) there is an unexpected degree of opposition. It has taken not only the Rhodesian authorities by surprise, but also the Afri-can nationalists who have been attempting to mobilize opinion against the proposals Demonstrations were planned by the African National Council, the thinly dis-guised nationalist organization formed hastily last month, to greet Lord Pearce when they afrived in Salis-bury this week to test African opinion on the proposals. The conclusion? Industrial the collapse of society." ...

The conclusion? Industrial the conclusion? Industrial the conclusion? It is also a significant sign that the advance guard of the environmental lobby is giving up its Cassandra role and starting to jead the search for Many people, even in gov- up its Cassandra role and einment, pay-lip service to starfing to lead the search for the second idea but shrink positive, constructive answers mised. Much of the Blueprint is a forceful recitation of how over-population, over-pollution and over-production are com-bining to disrupt the life-support systems of our planet, with the probability of irre-versible breakdowns occur-of our children.

"If we allow the present growth rate to persist," a key section reads, "total ecologi-cal demand (a measure of man's impact on the environ-ment) will increase by a fac-tor of 32 over the next 66 years — and there can be no-serious person today willing to concede the possibility, or accommodating the pressures disruption of ecosystems, the failure of food supplies, the

The conclusion? Industrial (and developing) societies must be established. More than that, however, they cannot possibly be stabilised for obvious electoral reasons unless the path to stability is made both attractive and made to point to an attractive made to point to an attractive place: a society where stability means instead of stagnation a more varied, enjoyable and fulfilling life for all.

It sounds like a tall order. But the authors of the Blueprint, and its signatories, believe it can be met if and print and its signatories, be-lieve it can be met if and only if we abandon our cur-rent short-term and piece-meal approach and develop a very long-term, gradual, care-fully orchestrated and posi-tive program of change. The tive program of change. The real significance of the Blue print is that it sets out, for the first time, a sketch plan of what such an integrated program for stability might look Its central idea is to withdraw from "growth" in care-luly timed stages of increas-ing magnitude. First, simple controls to reduce pollution by legal and technical means followed by a freeze operation to half the trends — for examto hait the trends—for example, the complete banning of persistent pesticides.

Then there would have to be a major "substitution operation" to replace heavy resurres and colluting source-using and polluting technologies (e.g. the motor car) by less damaging alternatives. Next would come the invention and phasing in of 'alternative technologies' that can be sustained indefi-nitely because they neither use resources nor pollute (e.g.) tish farms fed by sewage).

The correct timing and interlocking of these stages will be critical if they are to avoid severe social and economic tensions. The Blueprint au-thors are the first to admit it. And one can see why if one considers three of their many specific proposals; namely, a metals, a tax to penalise short-lived or throw-away products, and a power tax.

The long-term aim of the power tax is to force a switch from production by energy hungry machines to labour-intensive industries i.e., to create jobs but the immedi-ate effect of the tax on shortcreate hefty unemployment in many industries (think of cars that lasted 25 years); But by far the most radical and controversial of all the Blueprint's arguments is that the final stages of withdrawal from growth should be a mas-sive decentralisation and deurbanisation a return to village industries, village -urbanisation communities, and village poli-

Sifting Through the Chaff

ing a political campaign begins within understanding that American reporters. Vice-President Agnew's testimony not-withstanding, almost invariably write in an idiom of praise.

Thus, a politician who is well known for lying will never be described in the papers or on television as, say. 'Sena-tor Survine, an incorrigible har' or in any variation approximating this forthright statement of the fact. Instead, the reporter will struggle to describe his man in words that give him a pat on the back the back.

He may write that Senator Survine
"is widely respected as a wily political operative with a genius for keeping his opponent off-balance." Translated from political journalese, this means, "nobody can believe a word the rascal

For the reader who wants to follow For the reader who wants to torow the campaign intelligently, then, the first step is to learn to watch out for the slarm signals of reporters', praise words and, on spotting them, to stop-immediately and translate.

Many politicians, as we know from the history books, are unprincipled opportunists with no coherent program in mind beyond getting elected, and their getting re-elected. The history books tell us this, but no one whose knowlege of government comes entirely from newspapers and watching TV is likely with a man of negligible principle and imitless appetite for office, will invariably call him a "pragmatist." Generally speaking "pragmatist." and "pragmatist" and "pragmatist" and "pragmatist" and provide for discussion will stand whatever it takes to get elected.

The person who follows politics and government closely may have noticed that, according to newspaper and televi-sion; every man on the public payroll has either "a wonderful or a good sense

Some proble men do, in fact, have good senses of humor. Such a man is said by reporters to have "a wonderful sense of humor." If the reporter, however, says, "Bill Sykes has a good sense of humor," it almost certainly means that Sykes hasn't laughed at anything since the last time he squashed out a cigar butt on a sleeping or fain.

Some praise words are extremely sigar butt on a sleeping or proper some praise words are extremely difficult to translate precisely into English. Lately, to take a case, reporters have been describing every other public man in Washington as "soft-spoken," a warm good-guy term that conjured up images of Gary Cooper doing the right thing when the chips are down. Actually in translation it means "evasive." ly, in translation it means "evasive, "mumbling," "woolly-headed," and in some cases, perhaps, "drunk."

Yes, our public men, some of them, do get drunk at times, but never in pol-tical journalese. There they are 'fa-'overworked," utspoken" or "resting from the terri-stresses of government."

The more influential the statesman under consideration, the more intense the praise words. The White House being the most influential set of offices in the country, its occupants naturally receive more gushing praise than any

Thus, anybody on the White House stall who would not be embarrassed to take an intelligence test is commonly described as "brilliani." Anyone under the age of 49 is "young". Does he refuse to speak to, anyone of lower rank except to buily and insult? He is "a tireless demanding worker whose brutal 18-hour days would kill any man less devoted to his job.

To the reporters, public men differ from common humanity, for their ranks do not include anyone of mean spirit or cold heart. Mean-spirited, cold-hearted cold heart. Mean-spirited, cold-hearted men are almost always in political journalese. "tough minded." They are "level headed." They are "realistic."

As a general rule of thumb, any person described in political journalese as "tough minded." "level headed" and "realistic" all in one paragraph can be safely regarded as a man who would make Attija the Hun, by comparison, seem like a "bleeding heart." ison, seem like a "bleeding heart."

The journalist's custom of giving indiscriminate praise to every public man since Stalin leaves a problem: how to recognize the man who deserves the praise the reporters give him. Here, the trick is to watch for telltale reporters' phrases hinting that the man being discussed lacks such qualities as men-dacity, evasiveness, callousness, meanspiritedness, opportunism, bloody-min-dedness and megalomania.

If, in political journalese, he is called "unrealistic." "a romantic." "a poet" or some similar term suggesting that he is not the sort who could whip any man in the bar, he is being genuin-ely praised in political journalese, which simultaneously suggests that none of us would be foolish enough to.

Miners Defy Union

PORT HARDY-Copper miners in this remote northern Vancouver Island community rejected union orders Thursday to return to work.

Just over 300 men walked out at midnight Tuesday protesting the cost of living. They are members of Local 115 of the International Union of Operating Engineers.

Local union president Gary Crossman told the men to return to work at an employees meeting Thursday, but Wayne Fox, a spokesman for the miners, said the order was unanimously rejected.

VANCOUVER (CP) — The head of a Vancouver copper-producing company said Thursday the industry has come through a down cycle in the economy in relatively healthy conditions and that mproved conditions can be expected by the end of the Ross Duthie, presedent of Craigmont Mines Ltd., told the company's annual meet-ing that the industry has had to face substantially decreased profits, reduced de-mand and a drop in prices.

Although a continuing de-pressed market is indicated for the next few months, "the demand for metals must in-crease even if only a moderate improvement in the stan-dard of living throughout the world is to be realized," he

'This demand will inevita bly lead to more stable metal pricing and probably to an increase in the price of most

Duthie noted that the industry has witnessed a sub-stantial decrease in the ca-pacity of established smelters-"as the governments of vari-ous nations have imposed more and more stringent air pollution standards." pollution standards.

He said Craigmont's major customer, Nippon Mining Co. of Japan, has cut back its copper concentrate require-ments following curtailment of its smelter operation.

The cutback means Nippon can accept only 70 per cent of Craigmont's production, which has made it necessary

ly in Europe, at less favorable terms than it receives from

He said increased costs due to expensive anti-pollution equipment at overseas smelters has prompted several companies to study the feasibility of building a smelter

The Most . . . Closed, Quiet And Policed

The most "closed" opening in the history of the legislature went off quietly Thursday afternoon with corridors full of policemen but some empty seats in the public galleries,

Even government employees had trouble getting into the main Legislative Building as tight security went into effect in the early afternoon.

A bomb threat which didn't materialize and the heavy rains were believed by officials to be responsible for the unusual sight of several empty seats in the public galleries.

In front of the building, a group of about 100 onlookers was outnumbered by the combined police, officialdom and ceremonial guard for the arrival of Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson.

Roped off from the ceremonies, the well-behaved little crowd was a marked contrast to the 2,000 strong which turned out Tast year to protest-high unemployment.

At that time about 300 young persons invaded the inside of the legislature, smashing windows, ripping down at least one flat; and, in limited fighting in the public gallery, slightly injured a 59-year-old parliamentary attendant.

This, year, no one, including little old ladies; filtered through the entrances, which were jammed with policemen. Only those privileged persons armed with a welter of credentials were allowed in.

"I'm very disappointed I couldn'r get /in," commented retired school teacher Jeri Dill of Pittsburgh.

She had jokingly, asked one hefty policemen if she could trade garb with him so she could sneak in for a peek at the throne speech formalities.

There were no groups present protesting unemployment this year, which is only slightly lower than last year.

Only one protest group was in evidence and that was made up of a half-dozen smiling members of the Victoria Status of Women Action Group. They had the only protest sign—if you could call it that—and it said, "the eyes of the women of B.C. are you."

President Kathleen Ruff said they were there, representing a local membership of 60, to indicate that they want B.C. to implement the recommendations of the 1967 Royal Commission on the Status of Women.

"The Human Rights Act (in B.C.) seems impressive on er," she said, but in reality "it has no teeth."

She said they planned to do no more than stand there, but added invitations had been sent out to the handful of women MLAs for a meeting in the near future.

The rest of the crowd appeared to be only idle onlookers, unless the "prince of the pences" who had earlier in the day phoned police that he may bomb the opening was unobtru-

When Premier Bennett appeared at the door with pro-vincial secretary Lawrie Wallace to greet the arrival of Nicholson, one of the few young men in the crowd yelled: "He's going to be assassinated!"

The only time the police jumped, and the crowd muttered, s when the 21-gun salute started booming away.

One policeman was seen going automatically for his holster when the first blast sounded.

As the color guard marched away and the officials went inside, one note of discontent was heard from the quickly disappearing crowd: "I'm disappointed that he (the Heutenant-governor) didn't come in a carriage."

The formal silence in the legislature during the reading of the 30-minute opening speech by Nicholson ended when the customary opening day motions were placed before the house and MLAs began heckling each other.

The biggest laugh came when former Social Credit MLA off Willace stood to vote with the government in unholding a ruling by Speaker William Murray which had been ch lenged by Opposition Leader Dave Barrett. It was the first formal vote of the new session.

Under the seating plan made public Thursday, Wallace, who is now a Progressive Conservative, will be seated in the back row of the opposition benches, between the New Demo-

WINNIPEG (CP) nister James Richardson nounced Thursday night nat the new Canadian mint,

The huilding will cost an es-imated $16 million and construction will begin this year. Richardson, member of Parliament for Winnipeg South, made the announcement at a reception.

Richardson said he urged decentralization of fed-eral government activity ever since his cabinet appointment. He sought "to correct the serious imbalance which is caused in Canada by the cen-tralization in Ontario" and in Quebec of so much industrial and economic activity.'

Richardson said the mint will not only meet all Canadian coinage requirements, but also will manufactore coins from Canadian metal for export to countries throughout the world.

He noted that there are 65 countries which do no possess their own minting capacity and purchase each year more than three billion coins from other sources.

Look to Those Fillers And Talk Up a Storm

Yes, sir, when Dear Abby can't answer it they bring it to Dear Jack.

Here, for example, is an agony letter from a young male reader of our town whose name I must guard with my life. He writes: "Your article on the ease and fluency of conversation by The Talking Woman interested me strangely since, far from being critical of them, I am entirely envious. I have a terrible time making conversation. All the time people are talking, talking, talking. I have it there trying desperately to this of several properties.

time making conversation. All the time people are talking, talking, I just sit there trying desperately to think of something to say. I hardly ever think of anything. Rather than make fun of women who have the gift could you not suggest ways and means out of this dilentima for The Silent Man?"

Well, as I have advised my correspondent by return post, his is by no means an unusual problem, especially among sensitive young men. I, myself, before developing into a virtually interminable raconteur, suffered for years from such a severe case of nothing to say. In an age of angry young men I was simply an inarticulate young man and, boy, it was hell. At parties, when nobody asked me to play my banjo-uke, I used to sit in a corner making little trophy cups out of the silver paper in cigarette packages. I became quite expert at this, but it did nothing whatever for my popularity though, to be fair about it, neither did the banjo-uke. neither did the banjo-uke

For several long years I affected the part of a world-weary, exquisitely bored man of the world, a role not altogether helped by the high button shoes and velveteen Lord Fauntleroy collars that mother insisted I wear until the age of 27.

The phrase, "Oh, yeah?" was almost my sole contribution to any group conversation. If someone remarked that he'd a fine time skiing, for example, I would say, "Oh, yeah?" If someone said, "The difficulty with a viable reciprocity in the Middle East is the policy of unilateral parity," I would say, "Oh, yeah?" Time I would begin another silver-paper cup.

The turning point in what, you can see, was a downright miserable social life came with my discovery of newspaper "fillers"

"Fillers" are going out of style these days, but they are short two or three-line items which appear at the bottom of news columns. They are — or were — the mortar which holds togetive the bricks of the press, strange little items designed for no other purpose than to fill a hole, like the Dutch boy's finger in the dike. In every newspaper composing room of the world when there was an eeny-weeny space that needed plug-ging the make-up man would reach automatically for a

I still vividly regall the first that struck my fancy. "A merchant in Banras, India." it read, "got a bill for a tax balance of one cent." It had a lilt to it that fascinated me, though little did I dream that I was on the threshold of a conversational career that boggles the mind.

Not more than a week later I was at a party — indeed, just about to start a silver-paper cup — when I became aware that people were talking about income taxes, as people at parties so often do, I waited cunningly until I saw my chance. Then, with an infectious chuckle, I remarked, "A merchant in Banras, India, got a bill for a tax balance of one cent."

There was a pregnant silence. I felt the eyes of the gather-ing swing upon me with unfeigned interest. A tall, golden-haired girl in a dress with a steep decolletage slowly arose and came over to sit by me, looking deep in my eyes. The host slapped his thigh and exclaimed, "I'll the horn-swoggled." I was on my way and the rest, as they say, is history.

Since then, as everyone knows, I have perfected my system. The "filler," I've discovered, has everything required for tem. The "filler," I've discovered, has everything required for penetrating talk, being short, snappy, factual and usually so exotic that it simply cannot be topped.

Let the conversation turn to snimal life, for instance, and I am there to observe, "Between the spring and autumn a single pair of Angoran rabbits may increase a hundredfold."

A mere mention of any scientific subject and I dominate the room with my observation that "a single-cell battery will furnish current for 15 miles of barbed wire fence."

Should someone be foolish enough to speak of cosmic mat-

Ottawa Backs Saanich Housing Project

An elderly Oak Bay resident who more than two years ago donated $100,000 toward a unique Saanich housing proj-ect for handicapped and el-derly persons died Wednesday without seeing construction even start on the project even start on the project.

Today, just two days after the death of 80-year-old Mrs. Charlotte E. Fielding, federal-provincial funding approval for the $1 million scheme was Architect John Di Castri said today he expects tenders to be called some time next month, which could mean a construction start in late April or early May.

He estimated construction of the first phase would take Mayor Hugh Curtis said it was a "sad irony" that Mrs. Fielding missed the announce-ment by such a short margin.

"She really triggered the whole thing and asked regularly how it was coming along," he said. "I know she keenly wanted to see the project under way.'

First announced in December, 1969, the development will be on municipally-owned land off Vernon, near the municipal hall.

COSTS SPLIT

The first phase of the project involves construction of a si-suite apartment and 19 townhouses. The million cost, including purchase of the site from Saanich, will be met by a $750,000 federal government contribution and $250,000 from the provincial govern-

Ottawa, B.C. and Saanich will split operating costs on a proportionate formula basis. Curtis said the subsidized rental housing is intended for "a good mixture" — some handicapped persons (and possibly their families), some senior citizens and also families on moderate incomes. 'It's an integrated development which will serve a real need in the community." Rentals will be fixed later by the B.C. Housing Manage-ment Commission.

CENTRE PLANNED

Future phases will involve an activity centre serving both the development and the handicapped and two more apartments.

The $100,000 donation from Mrs. Fielding, described by Curtis as "one of the more generous gifts to the area in recent years," will be applied to the later stages in which several local organizations are actively involved.

Curtis said the idea was born in 1968 when Mrs. Fielding told a friend who was a member of the Cosmopolitan service club that she would like to do something as a me-morial to her family which would also benefit the com munity.

"The club kicked around a number of ideas and I was for handicapped persons in

CONCEPT CHANGED

Both the Cosmopolitan club and the Multiple Sclerosis Society put a lot of work into the early planning stages, Curtis said, but it became obvious there would have to be senior government participation.

He explained that the scheme had "changed character" two or three times since its inception, and the reas-sessment and re-costing contributed to the delay.

A former resident of Sarnia, Ont., for more than 30 years, Mrs. Fielding came to Vic-toria in 1956. Funeral services will be held Monday,

Rising Stream Levels Boost Anglers' Outlook

Reports from most points on Vancouver Island indicate that rivers and streams are swelling with melting snow and rain which could put them in prime condition for steel-heading this weekend.

But, intrading on this scene of optimistic bliss, comes word that a number of Island streams are inaccessable along much of their lengths because of deep snow on unplowed roads. Another factor to take into cosnideration, before jumping undesirable flood conditions.

Into the family buggy and racing up-Island, rod in hand, is that a continuation of the present rain could very well cause undesirable flood conditions.

The Koksilah River level has risen greatly but, as many anglers know, this is one stream that can fluctuate rapidly.

The Cowichan River is rising and steelheaders working favorite haunts between the Silver Bridge and Riverbottom areas have been picking up the odd fish, but not in any greatquantity. This picture could happily change by the weekend as rising water invite an ascent of those hefty sea-run rain-

The same conditions exist in the areas around Courtenay and Campbell River, where an additional hazard to angling comes into ply. Ice along the edges of the Tsolum, Oyster and Quinsam doesn't prevent 'lishermen from casting out their lures, but proves to be quite a hindrance to retrieving both hardware and fish.

Angling prdessure was light in Saanich Inlet through the week despite an abundant number of bluebacks and grilse as well as winter springs in deeper waters.

Piers Island and Coal Island waters off Swartz Bay are yielding winter springs for deep trolling anglers while Trial Island, Discovery Light and the Chain Islands off Oak Bay are greatly account of the processing transport of the process o

Fishermen trolling along the kelp bed and near Bentinck Island off Pedder Bay are coming back with winter springs tipping the scales up to 19½ pounds. The most successful combination seems to be 12 ounces of weight and 65 feet of line. The stretch of water between Secretary Island and Bechey Head is yielding a good return of winter springs to fishermen that care to brace the chance of squalls.

Further up-Island, Cowichan Bay and Sansum Narrows are producing blues averaging 15 inches as well as winter springs up to 17 pounds.

Best spots further up the coast have been Northwest Bay around th booming ground. Union Bay, Duncan Bay and the Government Wharf at Campbell River. * * * *

NIBBLES: We must dispute a claim by provincial minister without portfolio Grace McCarthy that a demand by the president of the Canadian Parks Association to stop advertising our national parks abroad is "selfish and short-sighted" president J. C. Nelson said earlier this week in a letter to Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien that Jasper and Banff parks shouldn't be the subject of intense publicity campaigns overseas — problems are occuring in certain segments of the parks through overuse now — bringing in added hordes of tourists isn't about to remedy the matter.

Regal Coach Seeking International Flavor

BOWLER OF WEEK

Strong finish has sent Darlene Williams into victory circle of T i m e s Bowler-of-the-Week contest for first time. Darlene (above) and Gloria Kelly tied for lead in women's tenpin division in 13th week of competition as each fired three-game series of 563. However, Darlene received award on strength of rolling ighest single-game score 200 in her final game. Coach Brian Hughes cer tainly wants it that way.

Hughes announced today that he has received encouraging letter's from three Carib bean players who are "keen" on playing with Victoria in the six-team circuit.

Completing the roster of clubs in the semi-pro summer league are Vancouver Spar-tans, who played in the West-ern Canada League last year; Columbus. Croatia and Ein-tracht, the Vancouver-area clubs that have pulled out of the Parific Coast League, and Richmond Ramperts, a new

Some Fear More U.K. Jobless

LONDON (CP) - Unemployment in the United Kingdom has shot past one mil-lion, the highest level since the disruptive post-war period when promises of a brighter future tempered the misery of joblessness.

Similar assurances are again being offered by the government but so far these have done little to offset some of the most strident criticism aimed at the Conservatives since they took office in 1970.

Adding to the shocked atmosphere in Britain is the fear, shared by many observers and some officials, that unem-ployment will be even worse next month.

Government sources say the present figure might have been higher if this had not been an unusually-mild

January, representing a sea-sonally-adjusted rate of 4.3 per cent and an increase of 56,691 over last month.

A more usual level is roughly two per cent or less.

The department of employment said 977,538 were idle in England, Scotland and Wales on Jan 10, an increase of 54,662 from Dec. 6, and 46,045 were out in Northern Ireland, a rise of 2,029.

Unemployment was the highest in Northern Ireland at 9.0 per cent of the work force. In Scotland it was 7.1, in Wales 5.8 and, in northern England 6.9 per cent.

Union officials estimate that Britain's true unemployment level is considerably higher than the present 6.1 per cent in the United States.

Martin Jukes; director-general of the Engineering Employers' Federation, recently said the high number of jobless resulted in great part from industrial rationati-zation-machines, were being installed to replace men.

Unemployment last passed one million in 1947 when Britain was struggling to repair the massive damage from the Second World War, trying to cope with massive debts incurred in the six-year struggle and facing a crucial fuel shortage aggravated by a hard winter.

ALCOHOL LIMITS SET FOR BEER

TORONTO (OP) - The federal food and drug directorate has announced new guidelines designed to make standard the alcohol content and product designations of Canadian council published in the Canada Gazette in early December, the new guidelines set out the designation for brewery products and the upper and lower alcohol concategory.

The categories and limits are: light beer 1.2 to 2.5 per cent alcohol by volume; beer, ale, porter and stout 2.6 to 5.5 per cent; and malt liquor 5.6

Brewers Association of Cana-da in Ottawa said all the new guidelines are expected to be in force by early June.

The move follows two years of discussions between the directorate and Canadian brewing firms. Breweries say they are hopeful it will lead to simplification of beer marketing across the country.

across the country.

The association spokesman said that alcohol by volume and alcohol by weight are just two different ways of explaining the same thing. In Ontario, he added, most beer averages about five per cent alcohol by volume or four per cent alcohol by weight; but in both cases the alcoholic content of the beer is the same. tent of the beer is the same.

Judge Allows Confession

A written confession by a 23-year-old Saanich man, charged with non-capital murder, was admitted as evi-dence in B.C. Supreme Court

Thursday was the fourth day of the trial of Morris Alexander Sutton, accused of the fatal stabbing of Donald Lynn Williams, 26, on Sept.

The stabbing occurred in a second-floor apartment at 840 Tolmie in Saanich.

The accused's admissions were written by himself at the Saanich police station about an hour and a half after the

NO THREATS

In addition to the written statement, there was further evidence in a question and an-swer period with two Saanich detectives at the station.

The statement and answers were permitted by Mr. Jus-tice John Aikens after more than 10 hours of testimony and dehate by Crown counsel Alan Bigelow and defence counsel J. J. Gow. Aikens ruled that neither the state-ment nor the answers had been obtained through the ac-cused being influenced by ei-ther threats or inducements.

In his confession, Sutton, stated that, after making coffee at the apartment, "I took the knife and I stabbed him struggled and I believe he fell down the stairs.'

HOMOSEXUALS

In the question-and-answer period at the station Sutton told Det. Sgt. Herbert Clarke that he and Williams had been homosexual partners for almost two years, except for a three-month period before the stabbing incident.

He kicked me out and said past was, too obvious to too many people," Sutton had written that after the stabbing he had jumped out of a win-dow onto a roof but having nowhere to run had come back into the room and phoned the police.

Sgt. Frederick Acreman of the Victoria police testified receiving a call about 3:30 p.m. Sept. 10. A male voice had said: "Tve just killed a man with a knife at 840 Tol-mie. Would you send some help?"

GAVE NAME

Asked to identify himself, the caller gave his name as Morris Sutton, 840 Tolmie." Acreman testified that he had relayed the information

Saanich Det. Earl Hernhlad testified that the injured man was lying inside the front door when he arrived at the Tolmie house.

Hernblad testified that there were stains which ap-peared to be blood on both of Sutton's hands, what looked like dried blood in his fingernails, and a spot that also ap lens of Sutton's glasses.

JOBHUNTER'S JUNGLE BOOK

1. Be precise in your job searching. The "Got any jobs?" proach merely frustrates you and the employer.

2. Don't overdo your ability. It doesn't take long to blow an applicant's cover. Supermen are rare, an aspiring Clark Kent is usually preferred.

s. Know yourself. Your qualifications tell the employer so much, but interests can also be a help in securing a job. A gunnaker may be drawn towards an applicant who loves hunting, but if your sole interests revolve around the local anarchist group, you may excuse his silence.

5. Don't hold out for that exquisitely creative job of your dreams. For instance, in the newspaper business, there's an everlasting stream of burgeoning novelists in need of a week-ly wage who are prepared to lease their talents to the service

5. If at first you don't succeed, leave as vital an impact as you can for next time. Carving your phone number on an employer's desk may be a little too extreme, but leaving that little extra impression may lead to an unexpected phone

But the impulsive would-be soldier gets short shrift from Carriere. His first screening, based, as Carriere admits, on educated guesswork, is backed up with an extensive hattery of psychological test-ing in Vancouver. Here, for three days, everything from the applicant's attitude to drugs to his favorite parent is sifted.

Carriere is not deterred the long hair of many of his applicants, the bulk of whom are boys, 18 to 19 years of age. The Vancouver test centre will apparently tolerate casuainess, too.

A degree is no more an automatic meal ticket here than anywhere else. Specialized degrees in engineering, agricul-ture electronics and the like are welcome additions to the potential applicant's list of qualifications, but an arts graduate is still all too fre-quently a typist or a patient type in the parks department's laboring squad.

Englishwoman's Lib Has Tougher Battle Ahead

By MYRA MacPHERSON Special to The Times

WASHINGTON Mitchell, one of Britain's wo-men's liberation leaders, says the feminist movement faces far more hostility in England than in the United States.

"You never see a man change a diaper in England. There is what I call 'pedestal discrimination.' You're treated well (but kept in your place). I prefer outright hostilit." said the author of Wotility," said the author of Wo-men's Estate. This is a small book that combines common book that commons common sense with off-putting scholar-ly rhetoric on the women's liberation movement and the worldwide society that places women in a second-class role.

Decries Hostility

Miss Mitchell decries the hostility that greets those who try to change the menial jobs women get in England, the educational content of the all-girl schools which "limit aspirations" and the sexually unequal educa-tion system — "the proportion of girl university students is the same as it was in 1920,"

She says she feels the British tradition of sex-segregated schools breed men with a lot of hangups, sexually and otherwise. "What can one expect if the only people you see from the age of 11 to 18 are the same says."

the same sex?"
Wearing brown corduroy slacks and a multi-colored sweater and no make-up, 32-year-old Miss Mitchell — who looks like a better-looking, young Eleanor Roosevelt spoke to a mostly female audience at the Institute of Poli-cy Studies (IPS).

Before the talk, she spoke expressively about the mové-ment and had enough reasonableness to soften the nearest male chauvinist big. ('Male TV interviewers always start out saying. I suppose you hate men' and are Jaken back when I say, 'No, we're all in this together.' ") this together.''')

She says she doesn't think, for example, that a woman whould be elected to office just because she's a woman. 'A lot of women support Shir ley Chisholm. I absolutely agree if you agree with her politics, but not solely if she's a woman — and had the politics of Nixon, for example."

Miss 'Mitchell, a "Marxistseparated for a long time, but not divorced. She also does not "go along with the slogan you should abolish marriage and get rid of the family." People who talk like that, she says dente an "god to intersays, denote an "end to inter-personal relationships." someting she doesn't go along

Free 'Service Tasks'

Although there, should freely 'I believe in freeing the service tasks in marriage. If we could take out the chores of raising kids and doing housework, then it would be much more possible for fuller, human relationships within marriage. The usual suggestion of daycare centres was supplemented with another possible example for editing everlasting cooking chores. It comes from a custom she remembers from her wartime childhood in England — "family restau-rants." If parents were work-ing the children went to neighborhood restaurants, run and their families for dinner. "It was all very social with a decent environment and de-

Another thing dragging down the institution of marriage is the fact everyone lives so long, she says. It was quite another thing to go through "until death do us part" at the turn of the centuriage span was 15 to 20 years, she says.

"by accident — my mother was just there," Miss Mitchell

She says she's been free of career-women guilts because her mother was.

"My mother and father never lived together and fa-ther died when I was very young. My mother was a bot-anist and took two weeks off each time to have me and my *brother. I went to work with her she used to climb mountains with me on her

'I really hit discrimination relatively late, and I got it in a preferential way. As one woman out of every 12 men at Oxford, I was told all the time I was so privileged to be there. I was so surprised to be there I really did think it an honor. Then I was the first woman ever to teach in the leads. The rest of the department, was 45 and all male. They kept saying, 'You must work much harder or we'll never employ a woman again.

Miss, Mitchell -says that there are, "relative to here, very few professional women in the movement in England. It's mostly the low-middle-class housewife." One group she belongs to in London went move to help women who do what is called "home work" (doing work at home for small factories). She described a life out of Dickens 'No one knows how much money is paid them. They are outside of any protections. We found the average wage was 25 cents an hour. Children were coming home and being put to work. She said many of these women have now joined the movement. "You couldn't go to workingtelass women and say, What about our weekly 'What about our weekly wage?' is their question.''

Miss Mitchell says "we should not say it is woman's right to be there in the work force. She has always been there. In menial jobs." She wrote simply in her book: mentary demand is not thee right to work or receive equal pay for work — the two tradi-tional demands — but the right to equal work itself." Now writing another book, Miss Mitchell tried 'living with a guy who believed in communal living. When we separated I lived in a 10-room house on my own. It was lovely being alone."

Brilliant Analysis

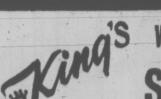

As for Kate Millett's Sexual Politics she thinks it was a brilliant analysis of some lit-erature such as Charlotte Bronte's but not so Norman Mailer is a "horrifically useful" example, she says.

"What Millett fails to realize is you can have a pernicious ideology and produce good art. Someone like Mailer so exceedingly embodies all sex-ist ideology, but with perception. He is seeing the ideology in which he is so deeply stuck.

• This is the fifth in a series of 15 articles in which Josephine Lowman, author of Why Grow Old? and leading authority on health and beauty, tells you exactly what to do to lose 20 pounds in eight weeks.

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Too often women take conditions for granted because they think of them as a natural part of aging. Many are fulled into a feeling of satisfaction by the charts of average weights. These show that most women gain as they grow older. But your ideal weight at 50 is the same as that for 25. ... If you have allowed some burdensome pounds to slip up ou, why not follow my eight week Beauty Improvement

Exercise adds tone to your muscles and prevents the sagging or flabbiness which sometimes follows the loss of many pounds. It makes reducing easier and the results prettier.

The health benefits of exercise are so great that you cannot afford to miss them unless there is some medical reason for doing so. Exercise will strengthen your heart and vascu-for doing so. Exercise will strengthen your heart and vascular system and help prevent hardening of the arteries.

There are important things to remember when beginning exercise. 1. Have your doctor check your heart and blood pressure and give you the go sign. 2. Always-warm up first by walking about the room for a few minutes. 3. Start in very slowly with only a few exercises, done a few thines, and gradually increase the number of exercises and the number of times. 4. Do not skip a day if your muscles become sore.

His brief recognized that corporal punishment is fa-vored by a majority of parents (a recent survey con-ducted by the comittee inrandom sampling opposed it) and will continue to be "enshrined in the statutes of this province."

But he urged its abolish-ment in Greater Victoria-School District.

What Good's The Strap?

strap is: does it do any good?

Maybe there is no single answer. But there are some people, like Dr. Philip Ney, who should be in a better position

Ney is a parent, a school trustee and a child psychia-

"It's scientifically proven to be much less effective or efficient than other kinds of punishment," he says of the strap.

"What you're really talking about when you want to "What you're really talking about when you want to punish a child is a desire to change the child's behavior. And I can name you at least 20 methods for changing a child's behavior, corporal punishment (like the strap), being one of them but one of the least effective on a scientific measurement of behavior change."

And why should that be?

Ney gives an analogy for adults.

"If you were slapped in the face by your boss at work, you would have a number of options—one of which is to quit. That's probably what most people would do.

"Now a child can't quit. A little girl or boy can't walk out on their family, so that option is not open to them.

'Sneaky' Revenge

"Another option you would have is to knock the boss down. For a child, again there's no way they can physi-cally attack their parents and get away with it. So that op-tion isn't available.

tion isn't available.

"A third option you'd have is to get angry at the boss in a sneaky way at work, perhaps by deliberately making, a mistake which would embarrass him or hurt him financially.

"This is the option that in a sense the children take; they get angry back in a sneaky manner. A lot of children given continual punishment have difficulty with toilet training for example.

"Of course this makes the present

"Of course this makes the parent mad again, they punish them and this leads to another mess.

"What happens is you get into a vicious cycle, this goes round and round. It happens not only at home, it happens at school. When the kids get strapped, they do something to get the principal mad again."

Always it's the angry children, says Ney. The more you strap them, the induct they do something. The most unlikely way of changing an angry kid's behavior is to spank

If the process continues, sooner or later the child will go in one of several predictable directions.

"He either becomes an inhibited, frightened individual, always frightened of losing his temper. Because this is one defence in dealing with your own hostilities—you put a tight hid on them." And anything that might shake your own control of your own anger is something you hate."

Or, Neys says, he might go another route and instead become an overtily aggressive person. He notes all this point that children and animals, adults too, develop a common trait when they are out of sight of an authority which commonly beats them.

Ney believes the boys, different cases, were reasoning this way after repeated punishment:

They must be right and I must be wrong. And if I'm that bad I should punish myself even further. Then I'll surely reinstate myself with my parents and teachers and they'll love me.

The boys were put in hospital because one tried to hang himself, the other tried running in front of cars.

Is there a place for physical punishment?

No doubt about it and I use it on my own children. The time you use physical punishment is when you want to anger and mighten then!

Real Cupboard Love

One of the feast publicized bounds, the service grew to departments of Victoria Branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society - yet one that maintains a steady service to the community — is the Loan Cupboard, where sickroom supplies, small or large, are available to any person, on advice of a family doctor.

Opened after the Second World War, with a donation of two hospital beds, this depart ment has grown so rapidl its supplies now take up the better part of a huge shed and two large rooms at the back of the Fort Street head-

Originator of the idea was Mrs. S. G. Cave, a nursing sister, member of Britannia Branch of the Canadian Legion and active in the home nursing service of the Red Cross. Ruth Cave saw a need for nospital beds, kermodes, hospital beds, kermodes wheel chairs and other supplies when sickpeople were convalescing in their homes She voiced her idea to Britannia Branch members, with the result that the branch, gave her two hospital beds it had been using for loan pur-

Number of items loaned and the number of patients helped during 1971 "is much bigger than in 1970," Mrs. Medley says. Actual figures will be given in a report presented by Mrs. Cave, still chairman of the home nursing and loan cuphoard services, at the annual meeting of the branch.

PIREPLACE, CHIANEYS AND

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

The Healing Power of Love

So many persons, often elderly bachelors or old maids, or persons whose spouse has died, are actually ill with a number of distressing aches and pains and perhaps abdominal discomforts. They come to me for relief, but the main cause of their trouble, so far as I can see, is the fact that they live such lonely, asocial and boring existences that they feel life is no longer worth living.

As I often say to such a person, when a thorough examination shows no signs of organic disease, "I am sure you would feel better if you were to find some work to do that would take you out for your lonely apartment, and into the company of people. If only you could help other people in some way, you would not feel so lonely and useless in the world."

I just read a fine article by Dr. John A. O'Brien, a research professor of theology at the University of Notre Dame, in which he tells of a bachelor druggist who, as he got older, made his life rich and rewarding. When he learned that the children in a nearby orphanage had no one to instruct them in sports, he bought a lot of baseballs, footbells, and volley balls, and took them to the school. There the 108, youngsters took the lonely man to their hearts and since then, every Sunday he directs the children's play. Now his fellow workers find his face shining with a great new happiness.

How wonderful if the hundreds of lonely people in this words could learn, as the druggist did, of the healing power of love. Their services would be welcome at such places as the YMCA or YWCA, a boy's club or scott group, an orphanage, hospital or nursing home, where they could not only give help to people who need it, but where they will be rewarded by the feeling of being useful and needed, and perhaps even loved. Often, as a result, they will be relieved of their aches and pains.

DANGERS OF SMOKING DURING PREGNANCY

I just read a Swedish article which confirms previous studies showing the dangers of a woman's smoking while she his pregnant. Compared with the babies of mothers who do not smoke, the babies of women who shoked during pregnadey have 50 per cent more chance of being born prematurely (too early), thus having a 1.6 per cent higher tendency to die in infancy.

Humus Use Important To Halt Water Waste

Possibility of increase in water rates for Greater Victoria users need not alarm home gardeners.

The impact will be felt by large greenhouse users and those who raise thousands of plants in coldframes and disposable containers, but the average garden user should find little difference in the two-month bill.

It is difficult to estimate the separate amounts as used indoors and outdoors, but winter bills should give a fairly accurate.

doors and outdoors, but winter hills should give a fairly accurate clue to gardeners not using water for a greenhouse during those same two months.

Keep your water bills for these winter months and for subsequent months and note gradual increase; and hunt up last year's hills for the spring and summer months. You may be surprised how little extra you use during the outdoor watering receiver.

be surprised how little extra you use during the outdoor watering season.

This will be particularly noticeable if you have a compost heap working during winter and use the rotted down material in all your planting and seed sowings in spring.

Compost contains particles of humus, each a miniature sponge to hold moisture. The sponges with their moisture are attractive to the tiny rootlets which find their food dissolved in the positive.

in the moisture.

Without these sponges of humus in the soil, the water you provide from a hose sinks through the other soil components (grains of sand or pure clay-which lack these absorbent qualities) taking with it the fertilizers you have been giving This is known as "leaching" draining away; in other words.

Without humus in your soil, you will waste large quantities of water endeavoring to make your plants grow. You will water every day, because the top few inches of soil dry out rapidly since they lack the sponges of humus to hold the moisture. By adding quantities of humus all over the unplanted garden from loads of old farmyard manure with its basic bedding already partially decomposed, the soil will be gradually conditioned with spongy material to hold a reserve of moisture. Your homemade compost should be used wherever seeds or plants are put to grow. Seldom do we have enough to cover the whole garden.

Too frequent and too much watering in summer drains away soil putrients, both natural and added, before the plant roots can extract it for plant growth. The same thing is happening this winter with the heavy rains causing minor flooding in many gardens.

Save water by conserving it where your plants can reach it. You will need all the humus you are able to collect during this winter.

By using it intelligently, you will achieve three useful goals—conservation of water supply: at least a stabilized water bill if the rate increase materializes; and conversation of waste material into good soil.

The bonus will be—better plant growth.

lead had been made and the dummy came into view, it was rather obvious to de-clarer that he would have to attack the club suit in order to fulfill his contract. But there was a major "worry" inherent in the hand: if East obtained the lead, a diamond play by him through South's king might result in the ambushing of the king. Hence South's approach to the play had to be designed towards keeping East out of the lead.

West's opening spade lead was captured by duniny's ten, after which the board's deuce of clubs was led. When East followed suit with the eight-spot, South paused for reflection. On taking an inventory of the five outstanding clubs, de-clarer perceived that they were the eight, nine, ten, jack and queen. Assuming that these five clubs were divided normally in the opponents' hands (3-2). South realized that he had it in his power to prevent East from winning a club trick. On the eight of clubs. South followed suit with

As is evident, West was compelled to win this trick with his nine. Whatever West now ejected to return, he could not prevent declarer from making three spade tricks, two hearts, and four clubs.

Had an unobservant South declarer been at the helm, he probably would have gone down. He would have led (I down. SEA LIONS BUGGED

SANTA CATALINA IS-LAND, Calif. (AP) — Three sea lions will carry electronic snoopers that ferret out se-crets of their underwater adaptation.

The secrets will be analyzed by University of Southern Ca-lifornia physiologists who say the sea lions will make a sig-nificant contribution because they once were exclusively land animals.

'We want to look at the way the sea lion's car-diovascular regulatory mechanism has changed to meet the challenge of evolution from land to sea," said Dr.

Chris Stevens.

Cartridge TV Unit For Home

NEW YORK (AP) - Sears, Roebuck and Co. announced Thursday it will market this year the first cartridge television units for the home for $1,600.

The unit will be capable of playing prerecorded tapes of up to 114 minutes duration; to record programs off the air for viewing at a later time; and is equipped with a blackand-white camera which will take" "home movies" within 100 feet of the set.

The sets will go on sale in Chicago in June, and else-where in the United States later in the year, a company spokesman said.

The unit loks like an ordinary television console. It in-cludes a 25-inch color televi-sion receiver, and a videotape cartridge recording-playback attachment.

The camera, with its 100-foot cable, is stored separately. A spokesman said, the camera accounts for $250 of the total cost, and without it the set alone is $1,350.

Sears said a color camera will be available in late 1973.

Power Lack Critical To Island Centres

A critical power shortage situation continued to face the Lower Mainland and Vancouver Island after severe icing knocked out all but one main line Thursday in the Fraser Valley, B.C. Hydro said today.

Dorothy Tupper, Hydro information of-ficer here, said the company is continuing its appeal to customers to cut down on the non-essential use of electricity to avoid a major

Miss Tupper said the mainland situa-tion is so had that nine crews from the Island have been sent over to help restore

She declined to predict when the pro-blems will be overcome.

Both 500-000-volt transmission lines from Peace River generators were knocked out along with two of the three lines from Bridge River in the Interior.

They supply all of the mainland more than half of the Island.

Hydro is getting an emergency supply by drawing a "substantial block" of power from the Bonneville interchange in the U.S. and from two thermal plants on the main-land which have been brought back into Inch rainfall, since Tuesday night, has be-devilled B.C. Telephone service and flooded a half-dozen Saanich basements and several culverts in that municipality.

Glyn Jones, B.C. Tel public relations officer, said that water penetrated the underground cable on Burnside, which made it difficult for residents in the Colquitz, Keating and Sidney areas to phone anyone in Victoria.

He said crews were up until 6 this morning to clear up the situation.

Saanich fire department had pumping crews up to 2 a.m. draining flooded base-ments, and Saanich works department ex-pected of be working all day today unplug-

No flooding was reported in Victoria, Oak Bay or Esquimalt.

The weatherman said that up to this morning 3.90 inches of rain had failen on Victoria area since Jan. 1, which is "quite a bit more" than the norm of 2.77. The forecast is for more showers today and Saturday.

On the much weather wearied mainland, either show or freezing rain was forecast for all the troubled regions.

The upper Fraser Valley was one of the areas hardest hit Thursday as high winds, heavy snow and freezing rain bore down on hydro and telephone lines and reduced road and rail travel to a minimum or none at all.

A wide area of B.C.'s Peace River-country was also without electricity for up to 20 minutes Thursday after a failure somewhere south of Hudson's Hope.

Hundreds of telephones were out of service in the Fraser Valley and Fraser Canyon and long distance service to Hope, Yale, Boston Bar and Princton was cut.

Profits Of Drink

Greater Victorians spent $20.28 million on liquor in fis-cal year 1970-71 and netted provincial government $5.68 million in profits.

These figures show a slight increase in liquor purchasing here over 1969-70 when gross sales reached $19 million and net profits $5.4 million.

The Liquor Control Board's annual report for fiscal year

NEW HIGH

Gross sales last fiscal year reached a new high of $224,238,136, up $18.35 million. Licence fees produced $921.811, sundry other revenues produced $399.990 and income from the social services tax was $87,583.

The breakdown of over-all sales shows hard liquor produced $114.1 million. B.C. and Commonwealth wines $17.88 million, other imported wines $6.26 million, and malt liquors

Profits at Greater Victoria liquor stores averaged be-tween 25 per cent and 30 per cent with the greatest profit margin being shown at the Fool Bay outlet.

HIGHEST SALES

Largest dollar volume in the capital region came from the Government Street liquor store which sold $5,978,157 in a liquor between April 1, 1970 and March 31, 1971. In terms of volume sales, the Government Street liquor store was the third largest in the province during 1971. It was surpassed by two Vancouver stores? the central licensee store with a volume of $7,780,097 and the Pender store which is number one listing a $13,123,739

Look to Those Fillers And Talk Up a Storm

Yes, sir, when Dear Abby can't answer it they bring it to Dear Jack.

Here, for example, is an agony letter from a young male reader of our town whose name I must guard with my life. He writes: "Your article on the ease and fluency of conversation by The Talking Woman interested me strangely since, far from being critical of them, I am entirely envious. I have a terrible being critical of them, I am entirely envious. I have a terrible time making conversation. All the time people are talking, talking, talking, I just sit there trying desperately to think of something to say. I hardly ever think of anything. Rather than make ruf of women who have the gift could you not suggest ways and means out of this dilemma for The Silent Man?"

Well, as I have advised my correspondent by return post, his is by no means an unusual problem, especially among sensitive young men. I, myself, before developing into a virtually interminable reconteur, suffered for very form such a severe interminable raconteur, suffered for years from such a severe case of nothing to say. In an age of angry young men I was simply an inarticulate young man and, boy, it was heft. At parties, when nobody asked me to play my banjo-uke, I used to sit m a corner making little trophy cups out of the silver paper in elgarette packages. I became quite expert at this, but it did nothing whatever for my popularity though, to be fair about it, neither did the banjo-uke.

For several long years I affected the part of a world-weary, exquisitely bored man of the world, a role not altogether belowd.

exquisitely bored man of the world, a role not altogether helped by the high button shoes and velveteen Lord Fauntieroy collars that mother insisted I wear until the age of 27.

The phrase, "Oh, yeah?" was almost my sole contribution to any group conversation. If someone remarked that he'd a fine time skiing, for example, I would say, "Oh, yeah?" If someone said, "The difficulty with a viable reciprocity in the someone said, "The difficulty with a viable reciprocity in the Middle East is the policy of unilateral parity," I would say, "Oh, yeah?" Then I would begin another silver-paper cup.

The turning point in what, you can see, was a downright miserable social life came with my discovery of newspaper

"fillers." are going out of style these days, but they are "Fillers" are going out of style these days, but they are short two or three-line items which appear at the bottom of news columns. They are — or were — the mortar which holds together the bricks of the press, strange little items designed for no other purpose than to fill a hole, like the Dutch Boy's finger in the dike. In every newspaper composing room of the world when there was an eeny-weeny space that needed plugging the make-up man would reach automatically for a "filler."

I still vividly recall the first that struck my fancy.

I still vividly recall the first that struck my fancy. "A merchant in Banras, India," it read, "got a bill for a tax balance of one cent." It had a lift to it that fascinated me, though little did I dream that I was on the threshold of a conversational career that boggles the mind.

Not more than a week later I was at a party—indeed, just about to start a silver-paper cup—when I became aware that people were talking about income taxes, as people at parties so often do. I waited cunningly until I saw my chance. Then, with an infectious chuckle, I remarked, "A merchant in Banras, India, got a bill for a tax balance of one cent."

There was a pregnant silence. I feit the eyes of the gathering swing upon me with unfeigned interest. A tall, goldenhaired girl in a dress with a steep decolletage slowly arose and came over to sit by me, looking deep in my eyes. The host slapped his thigh and exclaimed, "I'll be horn-swoggled." I was on my way and the rest, as they say; is history.

Since then, as everyone knows, I have perfected my system. The "filler," I've discovered, has everything required for penetrating talk, being short, snappy, factual and susually so exotic that it simply cannot be topped.

Let the conversation turn to animal life, for instance, and I am there to observe, "Between the spring and autumn a single pair of Angoran rabbits may increase a hundredfold."

A mere mention of any scientific subject and I dominate the room with my observation that "a single-cell battery will furnish current for 15 miles of barbed wire fence."

Should someone be foolish enough to speak of cosmic mata-There was a pregnant silence. I felt the eyes of the gather-

Should someone be foolish enough to speak of cosmic matters I smile my secret smile and murhur, "The planer Mercury has a year only 88 days in length." A mention of travel and I declare, "The docks at Liverpool, England, have a total length of 38 miles."

Proceeding to a party these days — though, in truth, I'm seldom asked — I no longer carry my banjo ike and the music to "Bye, Bye Blues" or even take along a supply of silver

Instead, lying cross-indexed in my mind, is the information that the porpoise devours its own weight in fish every day, that the praying mantis is the only insect in the world that can turn its head as humans do, that a Danish farmer owns the world's oldest horse, an Icelandic porty aged 54, that Isaial Lukens, of Philadelphia, invented the speedometer 122 years ago.

So there's the search have passed on to The Silent Man and I've told him to giard, it well. May be have as long and

First announced in De-cember, 1969, the develop-ment will be on municipally-owned land off Vernon, near-the municipal hall.

The first phase of the project involves construction of a 61-suite apartment and 19 townhouses. The million cost, including purchase of the site from Saanich, will be met by a $750,000 federal govern-

Curtis said the subsidized rental housing is intended for "a good mixture" — some handicapped persons (and possibly their families), some senior citizens and also fami-lies on moderate incomes.

"It's an intergrated devel-opment which will serve a real need in the community." Rentals will be fixed later by the B.C. Housing Manage-ment Commission,

Future phases will involve an activity centre serving both the development and the general community, a White Cross centre, a hostel for the handicapped and two more

The $100,000 donation from Mrs. Fielding, described by Curtis as "one of the more generous gifts to the area in recent years," will be applied to the later stages in which several local organizations are actively involved.

Cartis said the idea was born in 1968 when Mrs. Fielding told a friend who was a member of the Cosmopolitan service club that she would like to do something as a memorfal to her family would also benefit the com-

CONCEPT CHANGED

Both the Cosmopolitan club and the Multiple Sclerosis Society put a lot of work into the early planning stages, Curtis said, but it became obvious, there would have to be senior government participation.

He explained that the scheme had "changed charac-ter" two or three times since its inception, and the reas-sessment and re-costing con-tributed to the delay.

As I turned the car on to the spit and fell in beside the hawk, he began a hunting sortie down the spit. Alternately flapping and gliding about two with Hosford at the wheel not 50 feet away, was casing the joint, hoping to scare up a meal. At least that was the way I saw it.

Hansel, Gretel Back To Foil Evil Witch

Hansel and Gretel, one of the treats of the 1970 Christmas season, will be repeated on the network Wednesday, Jan.

This spectacular color production by Enemy Award-winner Norman Campbell, starring Judith Forst and Chris-tine Anton in the title roles and Maureen Forrester as The Witch, drew one of the largest-ever audiences in Can-ada for a performing arts program - an estimated 2.6 milgram — an estimated 2.5 mil-lion viewers. It was subse-quently seen by millions of other viewers in the United States, over NET, and in Bri-

Lest anyone think Sargent is bitter, he hastens to explain that he likes women. Married and divorced at age 21, he is chary of females and at the riage on his part are remote.

"I've been close three times," he said, shuddering. "But each time I managed to fight it off."

In truth, Sargent regrets elements of the women's lib movement. He enjoys opening car doors for his dates, fuss-ing over them and doing what he can to make them feel more feminine.

"It's all part of the game," he said. "I think it's great men go out of their way to be women. I'd hate to think of it being any other way.

What about his television mother-in-law

"That's not what I'm talk-ing about," he snapped.

Rebuff Cycle of Revenge Shows Political Prisoner's Life

On Tuesday CBC Tuesday Night presents a 90-minute drama-documentary entitled, A Cycle of Revenge. This powerful work has been adapted by Tom Gregor and David Rapsey from Reseni Gama, an autobiographical novel by Jaroslav Brodsky.

The memoir is a vivid account of the author's experiences as a political prisoner in Gzechoslovakia, of his release after 10 years in prison and labor camps, and of his subsequent work as a founding member of Klub 231, the organization devoted to the rehabilitation and compensation of beople unjustly imprisoned on political grounds. The Klub was founded in Prague in 1968 and received approval from the President of the Federal Assembly, Alexander Dubcek. Since Dubcek's fall from grace, however, and the tightening of the Russian reins, the Klub, and its good works are no longer opera-

Brodsky wrote his book after 1968. He left Czechoslo-vakia and now lives in Toronto where he is host of a Czechoslovak language program on the privately-owned multi-cultural station CHIN.

The first pilot episade in the projected series will be color-cast Wednesday, Feb. 2 from 8:30 to 9:00 p.m. on the CBC-TV network. Host Gordie Tapp's guest this occasion are U.S. country music star Roger Miller and two young Canadians, singer Lomna Ramsay of Hamilton and singer-guitarist Gary Buck of Kitchener, Music is under the direction of Red Shea.

Canadian-born Gordie Tapp, 45, has been among Canada's leading country entertainers for the past 25 years and his talents as a comedian, singer. musician and writer, have re-cently brought him fame. in the U.S. as well.

He was featured regularly on Canadian television for years and has travelled abroad 23 times in troupes entertaining Canadian ser-vicemen stationed throughout the world. He was introduced to the American TV audience as a regular on the hit U.S. network TV series Hee Haw and now is an international recording star as well, having recording star as well, having out several discs in the PEARSON number country music capital, Nashville Tennesses

The format of the Gordie Tapp Show combines relaxed country music and talk in an informal rustic setting. Tapp talks with his guests from the country music scene, and he and his guests perform as the mood dictates. Guests on the second pilot show (no telecast date has yet been set) will be Grampa Jones, Don Harron and Catherine McKinnon.

On the first pilot program On the first piot program, Feb. 2, host Tapp talks with guest, singer-guitarist com-poser Roger (King of the Road) Miller about his childhood, his offbeat but extreme-ly successful approach to composing, and his pride in becoming a hotel owner. Budding young Canadian star Donna Ramsay sings Some-thing in Your Face, Gary Buck sings Saunders Ferry Land and the two Canadians duet on the inspirational number Family Bible.

Bill Cullen Tells How To Talk Up a Success

The waiter at Sardi's walked over to the table with a broad smile, leaned over and said to Bill Cullen, "Congratulations. I stay home in the afternoon to watch the Oullen smiled appreciatively and thanked him.

Success begets success," len volunteered. "The Cullen show has just been picked up, and I want to tell everyone about it. I want to keep the momentum, going. If you play the ratings game you have to depend upon people watching the show, and to get people to watch, you have to tell them about it, and do in-

Cullen, one of the stalwarts in that distinctive world of TV personalities who specialize as hosts of game and quiz shows, is back on the air regularly as a host of daytime's "Three on a Match." Since Aug. 2, it has been a weekday feature on NBC-TV at 1:30. Bill said the show cut into the ratings of the CBS soap opera, "As The World Turns," ABC's long-successful e show, "Let's Make a He declares that his own show's ratings had gone up 80 per cent by mid-December. No wonder the option was picked up by NBC.
What is especially pleasing is that Cullen shows signs of bringing some life to a time period that was early death to five shows in that slot in the past three years, among them Art Linkletter and Joe Garagiola's "Memory Game."

"My point is if you're ahead of the game, yell," Cullen re-peated. "Ive never been host. of a show that didn't last at least four seasons," he noted. He doesn't plan to snap the streak now.

No one has been associated with more panel-type shows than Cullen has in radio and TV — at least 20 — either on a network or in syndication. At the moment, Cullen is involved in all three forms, on the NBC-TV network with "Three On a Match" in syndication as a panel member of "To Tell the Truth," and finally a three-hour radio stint every Saturday for NBC's "Monitor."

"I'm just filling in until they find someone else," Culthey find someone else," Cul-len revealed. "It's not worth it to me." He gets $500 for those three hours, he said, but his time could be better ap-plied. "I would have pre-ferred sitting home and watching football." Probably his best received and longest stint was with "The Price is Right." It ran for seven wears on NBC then for seven years on NBC, then got another two years on ABC, Cullen is negotiating; he disclosed, to revive "The Price Is Right" in syndica-tion "We've hit a snag," he confided. "The price, so far, hasn't been right for me."

Cullen would really like to see the game shows return to see the game shows return to prime time, but the subject remains very delicate with networks. ABC did put "Let's Make a Deal" into nighttime showing, "but NBC and CBS won't even discuss it. They still remember the quiz show reanded." scandals " always did well.

Daytime programming, in fact, always found favor with audiences. That's why you see so many dramas which are merely extensions of the day-time soaps doing so well at night — such as 'Marcus night — such as Welby.' I call them situation

After all these years, one might figure Cullen would tire of the single dimension of his career. "I like doing these shows. The hours are great for viewers. I'd rather have these hours than Carson's late Afflicted with polio, and crippled by it, Cullen has never let his infirmity handicap his career. There have been times when he was so busy doing television shows.

when he was a regular on Gary Moore's "I've Got a Se-cret," produced in New York, and did the weekly "The Road Show" on the West

"In those days, we had the constellations and they had berths on them. So I could get sleep in flight. I was never late for a show."

Back in 1996, Cullen did a show called "Winner Take All" for CBS, radio. In 1998, the show went on TV and was kinescoped for national show-

"Those were days," he re-called, "I announced soas, operas on radio. We did them, in the morning, and then had to come back in the afternoon to repeat the same show the West Coast. We didn't know that much about tape

From 1950 to 1952, he emrom 1950 to 1952, see em-ceed "Quick As a Flash", on ABCTV, then did. "Place the Face" until 1957, when he started "The Price Is Right." In 1956 and 1957 he called in 1956 and 1856 he called football games on NBC radio. After "The Price Is Right" went off, Bill came back with "Eye Guess" on NBC-TV for four years. That went off 18

He likes the idea of being back as host because running the show is more challenging.

"You've got to stay alert every minute. There are so many things to be conscious of - the contestant, the audience reaction, the time, the coversation. There's no letup, not even during commercial breaks. I think that's why people like game shows: I produces excitement, and fre quently the unexpected."

India Leads In Films

BOMBAY (AP) - Indie produced more feature films last year' than any other country, the Indian Motion Picture Producers' Association said.

It said India made more than 430 feature films, well ahead of Japan with 400.

Although Bombay is known as India's Hollywood, only 146 features, including 82 in color, were produced here compared with 251 in Madras.

Most films were in Hindi;

The association said the number of movie theatres in-creased last year to 7,500 from 7,100 with box office earnings exceeding $215 mil-

The ad agency man sitting out of camera range smiled. That's just the sort of un-scripted, unrehearsed, spontaneous flourish he wanted in the show.

And when Bruner continued mumbling that he didn't mean to be temperamental but there are some functions in this life for which men are better suited to perform alone, it only helped the mo-

The show will be distributed nationally starting later, this month, primarily as an after-noon item for Saturday and Sunday viewing, although the outlet in Philadelphia has chosen to put it in Monday night prime time.

In the first place Bruner, best known as the host of "What's My Line?" isn't a know it-all about playing han-dyman around the house.

He did learn a lot about remodeling and other house-hold gimmicks, however, when he and Natalie bought an old farmhouse near West Point N. V.

His "Waliy's Workshop" show, in which Natalie kibitzes, is merely his advice on how he does certain household. maintenance and remodeling chores He doesn't claim to be

Cost Cuts Urged By NBC Chief

HOLLYWOOD (AP) - Juian Goodman, president of the National Broadcasting Co., said Tuesday that unless ways are found to trim production costs "we will be forced to constantly look for ways to economize."

The three television networks in recent years have been forced to cut the number of episodes in series and Goodman indicated this could happen again,

He said that in his six years as president of NBC, production costs increased by onethird, a rate of growth far greater than advertising or audience increases.

"Simple arithmetic says that this negative balance cannot be maintained," he told an audience of production executives are meeting of the Hollywood Radio and Television Society.

Mission: Impossible Housecleans at Home

By LAWRENCE LAURENT
WASHINGTON (WP) —
Mission: Impossible is one of those evolving television series. The players keep changing and this season the on impossible missions force has stopped fighting terrorists overseas and turned to domestic corruption.

No matter how the series changes, however, it has been able for the past six seasons to draw enough viewers to justify the $220,000 per episode, cost.

It was considered a fresh, new kind of series when it arrived. Stoney-faced Stephen Hill headed the team and passed on assignments to a fine group of performers that included Martin Landau and his wife, Barhara Bain, Greg Morris and Peter Lupus.

Each week, an impossible task was assigned. A detailed plan was put into effect, followed by a series of imperiling events (each designed to hold a viewer through a set of commercials) and, finally, the trap door of the deceit was sprung.

Through the first two seasons' creator-executive producer Bruce, Geller boasted that the show ran far above its budget. Some episodes cost as much as $500,000 and the expense showed in lustrous production and costly crowd scenes. The Paramount Studio executives grew weary of the cost over-runs and brought over Douglas Cramer for the specific job of holding the show to its budget. Cramer succeeded and the economy—like the splurging—showed in the repeated use of blackout scenery and in the shabbiness of the settings.

Actor Stephen Hill was the first to leave "Mission: Impossible." He is a devout Orthodox Jew and he refused adamantly — to work after sundown. Fridays. This is usually the day when an episode is completed, frequently when mistakes are corrected and needed "recoverage" footage is shot.

(Hill, a most disciplined and thoroughly professional actor, moved on to make motion pictures and is seen these days on TV doing commercials for a headache remedy.)

Hill left quietly. Miss Bain left noisily and in the midst of law suits. She picked up a second "emmy" award for her work in the show and publicly denounced "certain executives" in her acceptance speech.

Landau quit when he didn't get a raise he expected.

Lesley Warren was hired to replace Miss Bain, but she never did supply the kind of glamor that the series requires. This season, Lynda Day George became the third woman to star in the series.

Leonard Nimoy joined "Mission: Impossible." Now, he's gone.

Still, the show continued in middle range popularity with steady Peter Graves as James Phelps, commander of the group. Continuing also have been Greg Morris as electronics-explosives expert Barney Collier and Peter Lupus as strong man Williem Armatage.

For the first five years, the programs were nearly always set in foreign locales; most often in Latin America and in Eastern Europe. This was ordered changed in 1971, personally, by Robert D. Wood, president of the CBS television network.

Wood told Gelier: "I don't want any more shows set in small Latin American countries. We have plenty of prolems in the United States. Solve some of those."

This season, something vaguely known as "organized crime" has been the target of the impossible missions force. Care is taken to explain that the problems are the sort that cannot be handled by national, state or municipal forces.

This is awkward, but the old suspense, elements con-

To continue the simile, as in the case of the thoroughbred horses, Hollywood also seems intent on inbreeding all the brains out of its products.

This is a sneering approach to the current flurry of activi-ty in Lotusland in which all the networks and all the studios are furiously preparing pilot projects for proposed TV series for next season.

The main thinking behind virtually all these works is based on what sold well last year, 10 years ago and 20 years ago, as determined by old rating charts compoterized projections and a sparcity of imagination.

Typical of the deep thinking which is going into Hollywood's plans for next fall is a project titled "The Brotherin-Law." It's an original con-cept by Don Fedderson who has thrilled you through the years with such diverse programs as "My Three Sons," "Family Affair," "To Rome, With Love" and "The Smith

Now comes Sanford and Son, a new NBC comedy series starring Redd Foxx and Demond Wilson, Foxx and Demond Wilson, which made its debut last Friday. In a medium which until now usually has delicately side stepped controversial controversial topics and handled most sub jects with white kid gloves a comedy is evident.

LOVABLE BIGOT

"They would have stopped this show up front three years ago," says Foxx. "If damn and hell won't make it, sure hell no Black's gonna make it.

Archie . Bunker solved the problem of damn and hell.

America's lovable bigot throws words like that out every Saturday night to mil-lions of viewers who lap them

George Schaefer, don't you feel a bit like a salmon swimming upstream to be moving to Hollywood from New York at a time when others are fleeing Lotusland in droves ar in history to move to California. The movie companies are collapsing right and left," Schaefer replied. "I came out in 1969 for one movie, then stayed for two more — Pendulum, Genera-tion and Doctors' Wives. By that time my wife and I had fallen in love with the place. So we decided to stay.'

SHOW BUG

Schaefer had been a part of New York-based television since Day 1 of the industry. The 51-year-old producer-director got the show business bug during the Second World War when he was assigned to a group of armed forces enrtainers headed by Maurice

For 15 years from New York he was responsible fo the prestigious string of Hall of Fame dramas on NBC and the prestigious string of Fain of Fame dramas on NBC and assorted other high-quality dramatic shows for which he collected eight Emmy Awards and other honors. "But after 70 network specials, I discovered all my bud-dies were in Hollywood. I have no regrets for all those years in New York. I've never been sorry I didn't move sooner. Remember, the others didn't have old man Hall for/an angel," he said, referring to Joyce Hall, the founder of; Hallmark greeting cards who bankrolled virtually all of Schaefer's long skein of productions.

Thanks to Hall, during the long bleak period of the late 1950s and early 1960s when drama was virtually extinct on commercial TV, Schaefer was able to continue turning out worthwhile shows, building his own reputation.

Even though he's left New York TV for Hollywood and movies, he's still keeping a flirting acquaintance with the

He just completed the director chores on part of a two-hour movie-for-TV by Sterling Silliphant titled 'A New Kind of Love," which will be the pilot film for a proposed NBC series for next season. It's anthology drama with two casts and two stories in each epi-sode, with love as the con-necting link.

NOT COMMITTED

"I'm not committed to work beyond the pilot film, but I do agreement in which I can direct more as time is available to me," Schaefer said.

Last spring, Schaefer took time out from other things to direct a 2½-hour version of John Dos Passos's "U.S.A." for Lewis Freedman's Holly-wood Television Theatre on public broadcasting.
"Everyone connected with that worked harder than they ever had. The actors had more lines to learn and worked longer hours than if they were being paid. You know, no one gets more than minimum scale working for Lewie Freedman,"

He added that everyone connected with "U.S.A." found more pleasure in their labors than if they had been receiving big money from commercial TV.

THROW BACK

He said it was like a throw-back to the early days of TV when everything was poor and desperate and exciting back before residuals and the networks with their clutches on everything."

You mean, Mr. Schaefer you subscribe to the theory commercial TV is too hog fat and prosperous to be good?

"I mean America doesn't realize," he said, "how underprivileged it is. You have to see British or especially West German television to under-stand what we're missing. In West Germany, television is just great. And it's part commercial there, but the people pay a small excise tax on their sets. I think it's a bar-

Bette Davis Still Calls Tune After 40 Years in Movies

By CHARLES M. MADIGAN

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) The movies aren't the way they used to be, but that hasn't changed Bette Davis at all. She still names her parts, and her leading men still, treat her like royalty.

Robert Wagner and Miss Dayis munched bacon, lettuce and tomato sandwiches while they shared a lunchroom booth with a reporter and diseussed the contemporary movie and its changes over the past 40 years.

They used to write the role for the person." Miss Davis said, "but now they just take a-script and fit people in that's terrible:"

She explained that, although that may be the vein in mov ies today, she still accepts roles rersonally written for roles rersonally written for her. Wagner concurred as he cited the movie he and Miss Davis have just done for Tele-"Madame Sin." It was shown on the ABC network last Saturday.

"Too much of the movie today is just talk with nothing to say." Wagner said, lighting Miss Davis' cigarette.
'It's all' effects, sound and camera. The lines' don't mean

Both he and Miss Davis launched into a description of scenes from Citizen Kane, noting that, although the sets were quite elaborate, the script, while it didn't minee words, trimmed away fat said exactly what Orson Welis

Wagner, probably Wagner, probably most widely known for this television, role in "It Takes A Thief," mentioned one scene from the movie "Casablanca," in which the late Humphrey Bogart says, "of all the gin mills in the world, she had to walk into mine."

What more did he have to say" Wagner asked. "That summed up the entire theme

What about television mov Davis and Wagner Miss agreed that the best parts of the movies they had acted in on television, ended up on the cutting room floors.

"The networks hire people who are told, 'fit this into 90 minutes, and they just chop up the picture. You can't retain the story line when you do that." Wagner said.

Both said that one of the best programs on television today is "Columbo," Part of a Wednesday night mystery movie series, it stars Peter Falls as a fumbling detective who inevitably gets his man despite his apparent naivette.

They noted that, in the "Co lumbo" series, the role lumbo' series, the role written for the character what has been written, and the personality chosen to por-

Joan Bennett Visits Her Past

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (TIPI) Joan Bennett walked across the Warner Bros. lot and onto a sound stage filled with wonder at the fact that she was a stranger in a studio where she had felt so much at home 30 years ago.

Joan Bennett, who has made 73 motion pictures, looked around her old stamping grounds with disbelief.
